

WASHINGTON STATE UNIVERSITY

LPRC

The Learning & Performance Research Center (LPRC) is home to active research in educational psychology. Our researchers focus on optimizing learning and performance in a variety of contexts and content. Through the use of advanced methodological techniques, we work to solve applied problems that influence educational policy and practice.

Cognition

Measurement

Evaluation

Washington Assessment of the Risks and Needs of Students (WARNS)

Equipping Teachers with Essential Assessment Skills

To address a national long-standing need, we develop instructional videos on the topic of classroom assessment with support from the National Council on Measurement in Education.

Increasing Learner Persistence in Mathematics through Instructional Materials

The work of the LPRC is supported through external grants and contracts as well as generous donations. We are grateful for your support. The resources you provide have a direct and positive impact on our students, research, and the communities we serve.

Brian French
Director
509-335-8584
frenchb@wsu.edu

